GOAL OF THE INSTITUTION

The persons who founded the Boston Conservatory of Music organized it because they realized the neglect of the government of the United States toward the development of education in music. Abroad, the founders have seen the national, yea, the international benefits derived from the patronage of European Governments. In Europe, no matter how poor a government may be, it readily gives financial assistance to institutions of music in order that free instruction may be given to all applicants who prove themselves worthy.

The directors of the Boston Conservatory of Music will take the necessary steps to secure financial aid in this country, in order to maintain at least one school in America where the large number of young men and women who would study music if they could, may have an opportunity.

While awaiting the results of these efforts, the founders of the Corporation known as the Boston Conservatory of Music stand ready to support the institution with all their moral and financial strength.

Beginning with the season of 1920-1921, they will give free instruction to those aspirants who show proof of particular talent for music and whose financial means will not permit of their spending the large amount of money necessary for a thorough musical education. To help such students, the directors have engaged the very best instructors for every branch of study,—theoretical, vocal and instrumental,—and, in the broad curriculum offered, they plan to educate Americans of talent so thoroughly that they will no longer seek education abroad; nor will America be obliged to continue to go to Europe for its musical leaders and its virtuosi.
